THE LONG HILL STRING BAND

The Long Hill String Band, with fiddle, banjo, mandolin, upright bass, guitar, and voice, plays Old-Time music, a precursor to bluegrass, and also called American roots music. The band plays reels, jigs, waltzes, rags, and ballads that harken from the Appalachian Mountains, to where settlers emigrated from their European and African homelands, bringing their music traditions with them and then blending this music from different cultures into a truly American style.

The Long Hill String Band frequently performs at fairs, historical sites, and square dances and has its very own troop of limberjacks.

Sample their music at longhillstringband.com and also their Facebook page (search "The Long Hill String Band").
